Dear Paul,

The guy who ordered a copy of POST MORTEM has writtan me again. He also wants PMIII, of which I have a one-for-one copy I can spare. While I'd rather keep the larger copies for the more important uses, like letting publishers see them, in this case my need for the money prevails and I'll not delay. However, I do want to wait until the smaller-sized copy of PM is here. If there will be any delay, I'd appreciate it if you'd let me know and I'll let him have one of my very few copies of the regular-size PM, too.

Those whose needs are not as pressing as mine may have difficulty undertanding the importance of such things to me. However, it is these tidbits that have kept me going on such simple things as postage and money for gas. These and a few small but important and ever so welcome gifts, without which I'd not have been able to get to Washington some of the times I've gone. It is that rough.

I have to go to DC tomorrow for a special meeting with a Congressional staff. Advance indications are slightly encouraging. This will allow me little or no time for the Archives, but I will phone and ask for the two pages of CE836 and I'll add that to the COUP appendix. It certainly adds perspective.

Best,
